

Henri Servaes is Professor of Finance at London Business School. He is also a Research Fellow of the Centre for Economic Policy Research and a Research Associate of the European Corporate Governance Institute. Henri holds a BBA from European University and a MSIA and PhD in finance from Purdue University.

His areas of interest include valuation, corporate control, corporate diversification, initial public offerings, capital structure, and mutual funds. He has published articles on these topics in all the leading finance journals, including the Journal of Finance, the Journal of Financial Economics, and the Review of Financial Studies. He has won prizes for several of his articles, including the Journal of Financial Economics All Star Paper award for his article “Additional evidence on equity ownership and corporate value”, and the Distinguished Paper Brattle Prize for his Journal of Finance article: “The cost of diversity: The diversification discount and inefficient investment”. He is an Associate Editor of six journals, including the Journal of Finance and the Journal of International Business Studies. In August of 2005, he was featured in the Financial Times series on Gurus of the Future.

His work has been presented at all major international finance conferences and at more than 70 universities worldwide. He has had previous appointments at the University of Chicago, the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven (Belgium), Duke University, and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and taught in MBA and executive programs in Russia, the Czech Republic, and Cyprus, and in doctoral programs in Belgium and Switzerland.

Henri has been involved in consulting and executive education for Anglo American plc, the Chase Manhattan Bank, Deutsche Bank AG, The Financial Times (Lex Team), First Union Corporation, Freshfields, PriceWaterhouseCoopers, and Suez, SA, among others. At London Business School, he teaches corporate finance in the Masters in Finance Programme, the Senior Executive Programme, and the Corporate Finance Programme.